Dr. Dunton cited as a practical solution of the problem the experiment practiced in Canada, where fully equipped vocation schools were established in the convalescent hospitals, making it possible for the crippled soldier to get at least a rudimentary grasp of some vocation by the time he was able to leave the hospital. In view of the fact that many soldiers will be so badly disabled that they will not be able to move around, Dr. Dunton said that steps should be taken by the society to ascertain just what form of work could be done at home to change the crippled soldier from an economic loss into an economic asset. Manufacturers and all employers in the non-ferrous and electroplating lines would do well to give this subject some earnest thought in the next few months, and plan their work and plant routine accordingly. Briquetting Non-Ferrous Light Metal Scrap By A. L. STILLMAN, E. M., M. Sc. Marked Economy of Changing Light Scrap to Heavy Through Bri-quetting--Important Points in the Process--Description of Machines, Output, Costs--Melting Tests--Strength of Resultant Metals IT IS no secret that prices of metals of all sorts have been subject to rapid advances during the last twelve months. Never before has there been so great a need for rigid economy in metallurgical and melting practice. It is noteworthy, too, that ingot metal and heavy...
