.How many of us can really say we have lived life to its fullest? Nowadays, we are reduced to bullet points and a list of things to do . today, this week, this year, in this lifetime. We are all born with these very primal instincts and needs. We view the world with this sense of awe and wonderment, when we are children. But where does it go? We grow into adulthood and we somehow shed these once cherished views. We become intricately tangled in the web of life; modern life anyways, as modern technology creeps in from every angle, we slip easily into automaton mode. The change happens so gradual, that we don t even notice! Until one day, we look back and wonder; What ever happened to my bullet point? To my goals? To my will? To my REAL needs? The answer to these questions, is often sought after outside of ourselves, somewhere unreachable, and far away. Within ourselves we hold the key to passage into the bliss we seek...
