Excerpt: .in its Father s home is panoplied with triple armor from which the arrows of temptation fall harmless. The angels hover over it, and guard it from harm. The Lord is its shield and safety, and whoso trusteth in Him will be saved from the enemies that lurk by his path and dig pitfalls beneath his feet. When Solomon succeeded to his kingdom, he complained in prayer that he was but a child in wisdom and knew not even how to go out and come in. 1 He thus in his humility compared himself to an infant, for it is a very small child indeed who knows not how to leave and enter the house. The child claims as its birthright the freedom of the home, it goes in and out at pleasure. A stranger cannot enter, or visit the master, without complying with i 3 Kings iii, 7. certain formalities. He must at least knock, and bide the invitation to enter. So custom has decreed in acknowledged deference to the occupant s right to privacy and seclusion. But the child throws ceremony to the winds, never imagining its presence to be intrusive or undesired; it runs to its parents in every difficulty, making known its wants and prattling away all the happenings of its little world. This should be the attitude of God s child. It should never be out of His sight. At every hour of the day and night it has...
