I won t try; but I wish you every success in making these tunes your own! As a melodist and a partisan of melodic composition, I tried to choose pieces which tend to announce themselves, that leave neither the player nor the listener in any doubt as to their form or their progress. (I also chose from among the least messy of the lot.) If heard chronologically, a picture might be developed of my 40 years in New York.but I doubt it: I ve always maintained the practice of jotting down the first stirrings of a melody, the moment it crosses my mind, then working out its implications at the keyboard; and I ve always composed, indiscriminately, out of the six categories suggested here. But it is true that music from my early years in New York will be under-represented in this selection. Those were days when---driving a truck, painting an apartment, or doing the laundry of an animal hospital---I felt myself a Charles Ives manque and my composition rivaled my model s in austerity if in no other way. But then I started getting gigs and I found myself writing music for these gigs. And when I found my mates ( mine own wild kind as Pound put it), I wrote music for them and me to play together. Bassist David Hofstra freed my left hand for less-cluttered ensemble music. Drummer Denis Charles gave me so much of his...
